

Academic Genitourinary Pathologist
Vanderbilt University School of Medicine

The Department of Pathology, Microbiology, and Immunology at Vanderbilt University School of Medicine seeks an academic surgical pathologist who is board certified or eligible in Anatomic Pathology and eligible for medical licensure in the state of Tennessee. Subspecialty interest or expertise is desirable in genitourinary pathology. Appointments are at open rank depending on the level of expertise of candidates. Clinical and translational research opportunities are abundant. Vanderbilt University Medical Center and the Monroe Carell Junior Children's Hospital at Vanderbilt University are experiencing expansion in many areas with a top 20 cancer center, multifaceted organ and stem cell transplant programs, and expansion of educational programs, clinical and translational research, and basic science programs. This is an exciting period of growth for the pathology department.

Located in the heart Nashville, Tennessee, Vanderbilt University is one of the nation's leading research and teaching institutions with undergraduate medical programs contiguous on the same campus. Nashville, the capital of Tennessee, is a growing cosmopolitan area with a population exceeding 1 million, diverse entertainment, excellent schools, and ready access to outdoor activities.
